

Tingle

my palate

There's nothing better to whet your appetite for a seafood feast than a glass of bubbles. Benedictine monks in the Abbey of Saint Hilaire produced the oldest documented sparkling wine in 1531, and paved the way for the many different types of bubbly we enjoy today, so let's get fizzical!

Life hasn't been a bed of roses for rosé wine - it wouldn't be for you either, if you weren't taken as seriously as your counterparts in your field. We hope to tickle you pink by introducing the many faces of rosé to the dining table and shining the spotlight it deserves.

SMOOTH LIKE BUTTER

Sour? Tastes like water? Nope. Sample our list of white wines that deliver a rich and powerful mouthfeel, packing a punch that still complements your seafood of choice. Usually aged in oak to impart weight and texture to the wines, they're smooth like butter for that smooth operator in you.

The 'Strawberry' Generation

Love 'em or hate 'em, we have to admit that strawberries require very specific conditions in order for them to grow - like certain grape varieties such as the Pinot Noir. We don't want to drink flabby wines, which happens when the weather is too hot during growth; too cold, and the wines become acidic. Under the right conditions, the wines produced are great and glorious!

Chew On This

If you've heard people around you describe wine as chewy and went "huh?", take a pick from this list to experience it yourself. Made with grapes with thicker skins high in tannins, these are the go big or go home wines that are intense in flavour and round in structure. Bold mouthfeels will leave you plenty to chew on with every sip.

Any Room For Dessert?

Sweet dreams are made of these. When fermentation of wine is interrupted before completion, we get liquid that's worth the calories. There's always room for dessert!
